How to cook sushi

21.02.21

To cook the sushi rice, you need to be aware that the water ratio is different than what you are probably used to. For every cup of rice, you need 1.15 cups of water and a dash of mirin (I really like mirin hence I add more like three dashes). This might sound like too little water, but is it turns out, it's the perfect amount to make the rice sticky but not mushy.

Start cooking the rice on high flame and keep mixing every minute or so until the water starts to boil. Then, lower the flame to the minimum possible setting and cover the pot with a lid. Allow it to cook for about 6-8 minutes, then keep on checking on it until there is no more water left. When that happens, the rice is done.
